

Project Report:

For our project, we began by getting to know one another and researching social finance which was the topic of our project. Due to the nature of the assignment and our lack of experience in the social finance field, we felt as though we were behind after our first meeting. Because of this, for our next two meetings we used an adaptation of the Extreme Programming model for our project. Each member of the team split into a single person group and handled a specific topic, either researching a topic, creating slides, or filling out the timekeeper sheets. We would frequently ask one another questions and get feedback, which allowed us to work together while focusing on our specific topics. As a result, we were able to quickly research our topic while also working on slides, which made us move much more quickly through the project while maintaining a high quality. By our final meeting, we had completed the majority of the slides which had been split evenly among our team, and spent the final meeting finishing the final slides and putting the final touches on our presentation.
